Emma's Child Portrait

Introduction

Successful education often depends on a fair understanding of the child. Indeed, because all individuals are particular, their personal rhythms must be respected.

All parents put forward many questions. Should I be more severe? More lenient? Does my child study too much? Or not enough? Those question marks have no absolute answers suiting everyone.

Emma's natal chart does not tell what you ought to do. It provides the keys to a new approach to those we never fully comprehend without external reference. And therefore, avenues to a better education, indirectly.

The report starts with the analysis of the positions of the Sun, of the Ascendant, and of the Moon, which are the three essentials factors to be interpreted in order to figure out the personality of a child. The Sun and the Ascendant for the main character traits, and the Moon for emotions, reactivity and instinct, which, as everyone knows, are of crucial importance at the beginning of life. Then, planetary dominants are calculated, and the three main dominants are commented in relation to the pedagogic context.

In the chapter coming next, the aspects of the natal chart are decrypted. When the aspects are at the same time strong and exact – meaning major aspects and tight orb – they provide almost as many pieces information on the child's character traits and personality as the configurations of planets in sign. It is therefore necessary to pay special attention to them.

The last chapter deals with diverse astrological factors in order to try to define an accurate profile of the woman in the making your child is, including in particular the dominants and vulnerability of the planets of the chart.

Such vulnerability is calculated in relation to the negative aspects that each planet receives, balanced by the nature of the aspect and its orb. This analysis enables to deduce archetypes of personality corresponding to your child and to provide the most appropriate pieces of advice for her blossoming.

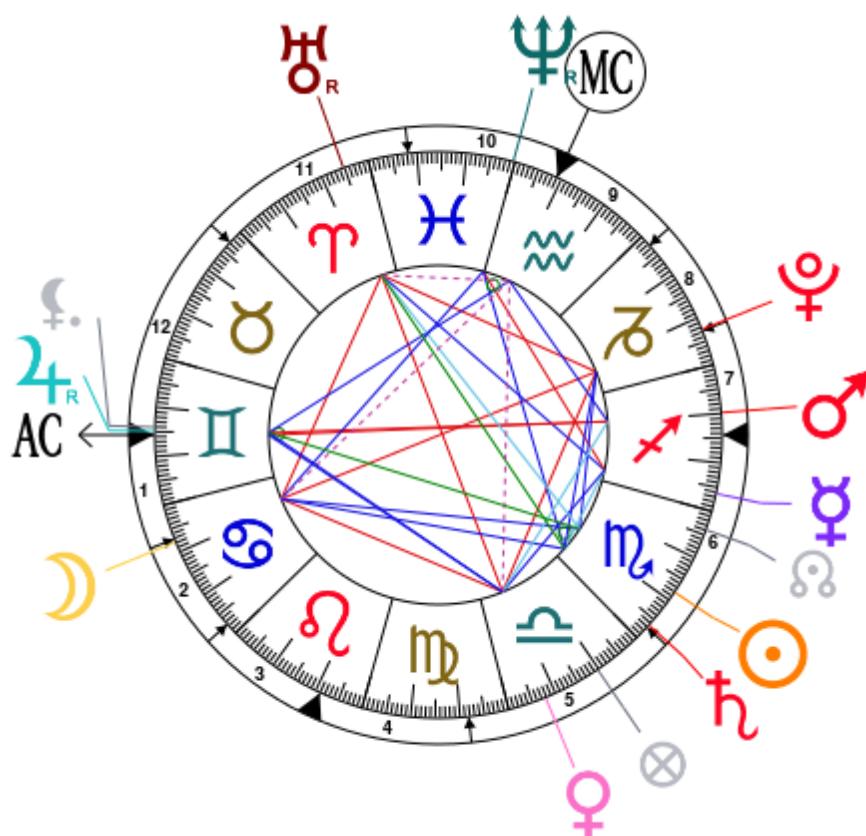

Lastly, it cannot be repeated often enough that love, tenderness, and affection are irreplaceable, and that education cannot be their substitute, no matter how advanced and sophisticated it may be. Who is your little girl then?

The Natal Chart and the Planetary Positions

Emma, born November 3, 2012, at 07:35 PM, New York (New York), New York [74.00W ; 40.42N ; 4W00]

Natal Planets			In House	Natal Houses (Placidus)
⊕ Sun	11°57'	♏ Scorpio	House 6	House 1	15°39'	♊ Gemini
☽ Moon	7°51'	♋ Cancer	House 2	House 2	7°11'	♋ Cancer

In keeping with the common practice, we consider that a planet posited within 1 degree of the next house belongs to that house. We allow an orb of 2 degrees for the ASC and the MC.

The Sign and the Ascendant of Your Child

Emma has the Sun in Scorpio

Emma is a dissenter through and through. More than anyone, she opposes the models people try to inculcate in her, anxious to stand out and to show her differences.

She may indulge in gratuitous provocations, and she often tends to test the strength of her interlocutors, perhaps harming them unintentionally with the only objective to better understand whom she is dealing with. She respects them when they resist her.

However, make no mistake. She is a vulnerable person in search of some inaccessible absolute. Indeed, she is never sociable without a reason, and she can be convinced only by people whose views concur with her beliefs. Although...

Individualistic and tough, she prefers to say no instead of taking the easy way out. Or doing nothing instead of "doing what everybody does" without knowing why.

These features may turn out to be valuable assets. She is able to fend for herself in life and to keep her distance whenever necessary.

Her potential flaws come from an exaggerated passion which may bring about jealousy and possessiveness. Your child does not and cannot remain half-hearted or indifferent. In addition, her mental acuity leaves nothing in the dark.

The Ascendant of Emma is in Gemini

Emma is curious and mobile. Interested in everything, naturally available and open to any new stimulation. This is an undeniable quality, even though idle gossips say that she spreads herself too thin or that she is absent-minded.

She already knows that nothing is carved in stone or final, and she is receptive to all unusual suggestions and prospects of change.

More than anyone, she needs to have a wide range of diverse activities. It is important that she never gets into a rut which rules out discoveries.

Indeed, her mind thrives on different kinds of life stimulations. Your child's rightful curiosity must be fulfilled lest she should lose all her energy and repress the enthusiasm lying at the root of her obvious achievements.

However, it may be necessary to ask her to refocus her actions. Your little girl is interested in so many things that she is not always able to sort them out and to persist with her objectives and initiatives.

Even though you appreciate her natural drive, it is possible that you must sometimes inculcate in her a touch of realism. Otherwise, her extraordinary wit may be futile agitation only.

A positive point still remains. In many circumstances, your child's inventiveness and thirst for knowledge turn out to be valuable assets throughout her life, although her perseverance needs to be stimulated as much as possible, for her own good.

The Lunar Sign: Emotions and Receptiveness

The Moon sign is often characteristic of the child's intimate behaviors. It is the reflection of her moods, of her emotions, and of her instinctive reactions on a daily basis.

Thus, it will prove as meaningful as her zodiacal sign (the sign in which the Sun was at the moment of birth) or her Ascendant, especially during the first years of life.

Indeed, since each planet is associated with a period of life, some astrologers consider that the position of the Moon refers to childhood. It is even more representative of the child's character than the Sun and the Ascendant.

Therefore, it is necessary to pay special attention to its interpretation when analyzing the chart of your child.

Lastly, the Moon also symbolizes the mother, or more precisely the way the child perceives her, which could be quite different from what she is actually. This perception sheds additional light to the classical interpretation of characterology.

The Lunar Sign of Emma Is In Cancer

In Emma's natal chart, the Moon is in the sign of Cancer. Sensitive, sweet, and a dreamer, she has a strong need for security and appreciates to be in a comfortable home, a reassuring ambiance, and a pervasive tenderness.

It is within the family circle that she can unwind entirely and express her qualities, because without this essential certainty, she remains on the defensive as if the outer world, the unknown, were dangerous at first glance.

More than other children, your little girl needs time to know whom she is dealing with, and disconcerts her friends now and then, because they do not understand why it takes her unusually long to get on well with them.

Once this step is completed, she becomes sociable, tender, and charming, like what she is with her family, naturally.

Generally, her memory is good, and at a young age, her imagination enables her to discover high-quality literary or film works. She often has the soul of a poet receptive to atmospheres and nostalgic about bygone happy days.

In the area of vulnerabilities, one sometimes notices strong impressionability and hypersensitivity generating anxiety. She may also suffer from a lack of self-confidence, a weak willpower, or be prone to whims.

The parry is always the same, i.e. to prove that she is safe, loved and has no reason to doubt it. Provided that she is given some independence in order to avoid to be in return overly attached to her parents. The right balance between love and freedom.

Here is one last word on the caricatural way your child perceives her mother (which does not always match her real character). She sees her as a person who is protective, motherly, sometimes symbiotic, at the risk of being intrusive, annoying or smothering when adolescence starts.

Her Three Major Planetary Dominants

You will find in this chapter the calculation of Emma's planetary dominants in graph form. It considers a number of essential astrological factors such as position in an angle, rulership of the angles and of the luminaries, activity (the number and importance of each planet's aspects), and dignity.

The three most active planets of the chart are interpreted and, on a pedagogic level, shed complementary light on the meanings of the luminaries and of the Ascendant.

Jupiter and Dominant Negotiation

Negotiation and respect for rules are crucial for Emma.

She has a strong sense of laws and conventions, and she respects scrupulously school logic if she deems it logical.

For this child, the order of facts must have a reassuring and undisputable coherence. Rules and laws are indispensable. It is difficult to function without landmarks.

Your little girl is pragmatic and, better than anyone, she abides by the school requirements, provided that no significant shortcoming disturbs a well-established mechanism.

Everything is negotiable. The refusal to accept parental authority, especially the father's, can often be canalized and stabilized, whenever justice and logic, the values your child particularly appreciates, are respected.

Neptune and Dominant Inspiration

Inspiration is Emma's true home base.

If she appears to be adrift sometimes, it is because she is the only person who knows – or confusedly feels – where her real path is. To tell the truth, it seems that occasional setbacks do not upset her. We shall see what the future has in store for her.

Help her find her place in life and anchor the row boat in which she tends to roam along external currents and influences.

However, do not try to permanently dismiss the numerous potentialities of her destiny or to find for her a one-way lane or a set path. Indeed, nobody except herself can discover what really suits her.

Her strength is that she never compromises on this point in spite of her apparent flexibility.

A stable home is tremendously beneficial to her. Nevertheless, nobody except your little girl can spot the island on which she will land in adulthood.

The Moon and Dominant Desire for Quietude

It is indispensable to respect her desire for quietude and her personal rhythms. The most difficult thing for Emma is to be constantly bothered and constrained...

Everything must be obtained without hardship. When efforts are unavoidable (lessons must be learned), she needs to be as regular as clockwork in order to become efficient, calm, and natural.

People will then understand better her specific problems. Getting used to a new school, to an unknown face, or to a sudden change of rhythm are difficult for her.

She is by nature more reactive than active. It is necessary to stimulate her desires and to teach her to fearlessly assert herself.

Time and habits are the best allies of this idler who reveals her qualities, her capacity for work, and her assiduity only if her lifestyle is devoid of disruptions.

The Aspects and Their Interpretation

Aspects describe the relationships between planets. They are harmonious (trines, sextiles, sometimes conjunctions) or challenging (squares, oppositions, sometimes conjunctions). They enable to grasp the problematics of each individual. For this reason, they are crucial for the analysis of a chart.

In this report, the strength of each aspect is indicated by stars, from * (nuance of the personality) to ***** (very meaningful configuration). Aspects are rated in order of importance.

Please note that a few aspects of the chart are not interpreted. This is deliberate, because they do not apply to the child's personality. Particularly the aspects of social integration (Jupiter/Saturn) or the aspects to the Midheaven.

The first configurations analyzed provide valuable interpretation keys. We have tried to explain clearly the possible problems related to the chart's dissonant configurations (squares and oppositions).

When aspects are at the same time strong and exact – meaning major aspects and tight orb – they provide almost as many pieces information on the child's character traits and personality as the configurations of planets in sign. It is therefore necessary to pay special attention to them.

It goes without saying that over time everyone can avert the dangers thus underlined, and can turn the dissonances of the chart into factors for strength, dynamism, and creativity.

Astrology is by no means a verdict. On the contrary, it is an addition of recommendations meant to help you overcome your weaknesses and blossom.

Important Aspects To Be Considered

★★★★★ Moon opposite Pluto, orb -0° 2'

Your child enjoys pulling the strings and manipulating situations – in the good sense of the term, that of guileless strategy – without anyone knowing, so as to remain a mystery.

Emma feels comfortable when she is not in the limelight and when, on the contrary, she intervenes subtly behind the scenes.

The way she behaves in private reveals the distance she tries to maintain in order to protect her rich and deep inner life.

Your little girl gladly cultivates her taste for secrets, even concerning her life habits, and her everyday rhythms, which may harm the popularity she enjoys among her entourage.

Indeed, how is it possible to feel integrated when one knows that one is different, a bit special? Make sure that your child does not suffer from the "ugly duckling" syndrome, the person who is marked by some specific feature having nothing to do with her origins or her roots.

This configuration may bring about anxiety. More than anyone, Emma is sensitive to abandonment, to separations, and to humiliations. You must use your love to give her the self-confidence she sometimes lacks.

★★★★★ Jupiter conjunction Ascendant, orb 0° 47'

Jupiter, the planet of good luck, of law, and of benevolence, is in conjunction with the Ascendant in Emma's chart. This endows her with an obvious natural vitality in addition to a composed facet, honest and affable, not to say pleasant.

She tends to see the good side of things and to meet her commitments; as a result, people often notice her reassuring and convivial comportment. This makes life easier.

Venus opposite Uranus, orb -2° 34'

Your child is romantic, without the shadow of a doubt. She knows how to give a fresh and unexpected impetus to her emotions, and to produce the little cutting thing that is the charm of an exceptional affective life.

During adolescence, she fears neither love at first sight nor fulgurant passions. Emma is unquestionably intransigent. This often gives rise to "all or nothing" types of reactions.

Such inflexibility could create romantic or sometimes friendly splits that she does not anticipate and which will probably hurt her.

She must be gentler, for she has everything to gain from it.

Moon square Venus, orb -0° 02'

In the chart of children, a Moon-Venus dissonance translates into sometimes freakish or changing attitudes.

The downside of this planetary configuration is perhaps linked to the variety and omnipresence of moods. Sometimes, whims prevail, and willpower is rather weakened.

I like, I do not like, I taste, I love, or I abhor. There is something pernickety and selective in the way Emma dispenses tenderness and love.

Her affection and her gentleness lead you to forgive her extravagances and her little stunts.

Venus square Pluto, orb -0° 18'

Your child has an affectivity of her own. Her passions are subtle, deep, and yet puzzling. She does not show any naivety, but she keeps her distance. This is what makes her so charming.

However, given her unrestrained tendency to control love and to pull its strings, she may lose the candor and the innocence on which many adolescents live.

The Pluto-Venus dissonance, which is rather harsh, predisposes Emma to several painful romantic disappointments in the future. This is the price to pay, if she is to experience new love affairs, this time fulfilling.

The causes of disillusionments are mainly related to a tendency to disregard people's sensitivity, to get carried away, to behave too toughly, and to use hard words.

She must learn to be patient and to show more empathy, so as to overcome adversity.

Mercury trine Uranus, orb 1° 32'

Your child is a true creator. Her innovation-oriented mind turns her surrounding world into a constantly moving field of experimentation. She is able to ask herself meaningful questions and to answer them.

Emma keeps on increasing the number of observations, relations and contacts without ever losing face. Actually, her mobility conceals a fierce determination and a strong insight.

With lightning speed, she is capable of grasping valuable pieces of information or enriching connections.

Her original or even fanciful approaches preclude monotony. However, her understanding of life may amaze a host of people later on.

★★★★★ Mars opposite Ascendant, orb -4° 31'

Mars is in opposition to the Ascendant in Emma's chart. This is not a dissonance, since simultaneously Mars makes a conjunction with the Descendant, the angle opposite the Ascendant. Mars on the Descendant indicates a nice capacity for action and a level of energy which, although higher than that of the average people, may sometimes seem inordinate.

Your little girl tends to act for people and based on them – which is entirely to her credit – instead of for herself. For instance, in some occasions, in people's eyes her behavior may seem a bit irascible or even bellicose, whereas from her viewpoint, she thinks her initiative was smooth and for the collective good.

In general, with this dynamic configuration, she has everything to gain from instilling more flexibility and more gentleness in her actions, so that people perceive her well and that she harvests the fruits of her conduct. After all, she happens to be a bit brutal although she means well.

★★★★★ Moon square Uranus, orb 2° 36'

Owing to this quite tricky Moon-Uranus planetary configuration, your child is impulsive and prone to drastic mood swings when the slightest hurdle arises.

Emma needs freedom more than anyone, and her emotivity is very cerebral. It is not that she is scheming, but she cannot help being strongly stimulated by her wild imagination, which sometimes destabilizes her.

Occasionally eccentric and baffling, your little girl has quite surprising reactions. Do not provoke her. She is likely to calm down by herself as she progressively realizes that some flexibility on her part can only make her feel more serene.

★★★★★ Mars opposite Jupiter, orb -5° 18'

Your child knows how to mobilize her energy. At the slightest possibility to concretely take advantage of the opportunities offered to her, she rises to the challenge, sometimes in a spectacular and effusive way.

However, excess of haste and zeal may harm and produce the opposite effect of what was expected. The downsides of this dissonant aspect reside precisely in the eagerness with which one strives to pursue one's objectives and ambitions, speeding up events even when the situation requires diplomacy and patience. The outcome may be a complete waste of time.

Immoderate ardor is often the reason why one misses the chosen target. Certain circumstances demand the careful management and lucidity that this planetary configuration tends to suppress.

Patience and thorough planning are in this case the best assets enabling to efficiently reach one's goal.

★★★★★ Mercury square Neptune, orb -3° 2'

Your child is most likely to develop an acute sense of psychology and of human beings' inner mechanisms. Over time, her relationships will become subtle, smart, and guided by an accurate instinct of people.

She is driven by her sixth sense, which takes her, at times, into strange but interesting paths.

In the field of relationships, there is an undeniable subtlety. Your little girl is smart and knows when she must keep something confidential, or on the contrary, when she must choose the right words suiting her interlocutors.

Nonetheless, the fact remains that the poetry of her speeches may be beyond some people's understanding. Emma happens to be a bit muddle-headed and to get lost in a few illusions.

She must be able to come back to earth and to be pragmatic, attentive, and focused.

★★★★★ Sun trine Moon, orb 4° 06'

This aspect is a strong homogeneity factor. The image Emma gives of herself matches her true nature and does not upset her basic balance at all. This probably brings about a certain easiness, consistent behaviors, and the determination to remain her real self whatever people may think and expect of your little girl.

In the best case, her determination and her sensitivity are in harmony. Her unconscious faculties are mobilized and controlled by her conscious will without loss of balance.

However, it is important to avoid the traps of self-satisfaction which harm real exchanges and lock the child in equally uncomfortable and fixed patterns.

One can remain natural without contenting oneself with only the well-being of those who do not fool themselves.

★★★★★ Moon trine Saturn, orb -4° 2'

Your child is sensitive and rigorous. Despite her balanced and sometimes modest behavior in private, her emotions run deep.

Emma badly needs protection and security. Do not hesitate to let her feel your love for her and to surround her with all your affection, even and especially if she remains too shy to express her feelings.

Respect her way of being. Her aspirations give her a fondness for contemplation or studies, the quiet areas in which she feels fine.

Aspects of Lesser Importance

In a first reading, the minor aspects examined in this part may be set aside, because they are less active. They only slightly refine the interpretations of the previous chapter.

★★★★★ Mercury sextile Venus, orb -4° 06'

This planetary configuration gives a fondness for the game of seduction. Your child is delightful and invents new reasons to charm or to be charmed.

Her affective life abounds with diverse discoveries and emotions. Thanks to her sensitivity, she knows how to win the understanding of her entourage and to play with feelings.

She is particularly concerned with the way people look at her and with the impact she produces during a meeting or an exchange.

Actually, Emma expects a lot from people: acknowledgement of her qualities, esteem, and consideration. She is probably thin-skinned, far beyond what she suggests.

★★★★★ Mercury semi-sextile Saturn, orb 0° 12'

Your child has a rigorous and objective vision of the world. An exemplary logic characterizes her behavior.

Her discerning abilities do not overlook any detail. She needs to understand the reason behind the elements of her existence, and to explore the backstage of the surrounding world.

Emma has the soul of a researcher, regardless of the form her investigations take on. It could be an extreme curiosity for human beings, a hobby, or a topic of study putting her in contact with a riddle.

It does not matter. For your little girl, life is an eternal quest for the unknown.

★★★★★ Sun conjunction Saturn, orb 8° 27'

This harmonious aspect between the Sun and Saturn gives a firm and at the same time discreet willpower, as well as a rigorous and impartial character. Very early, your child manages to remain clear-headed, even and especially in difficult situations.

She has a serious facet. She enjoys moments of calm and solitude, and more than anyone, she questions herself.

Although at times she seems to lack spontaneity, her behavior usually indicates some degree of wisdom.

The relevancy of her concerns reveals genuine profundity, maturity and precocious common sense.

Sun sextile Pluto, orb -4° 26'

The harmonious Sun-Pluto aspect hints at a perfectly clear mind and a great inner strength.

Your child never really takes herself very seriously and manages to put events into perspective.

Because she senses better than anyone the hidden elements underlying any situation, people say that she is insightful. Her intuition is good, and she is capable of differentiating between what is essential and what is superficial.

Do not try to cheat Emma. She is so precociously discerning that it seems difficult to take her for a ride.

Venus quintile Mars, orb 0° 21'

With a harmonious Mars-Venus aspect, the naturalness of affective behaviours prevails over opportunism and self-interest.

Emma does not cheat with feelings and prefers to be guided by her affinity or her antipathy. Her choices are usually excellent.

For your child, emotions can be neither reasoned nor explained. It is important to experience passions spontaneously and to give free rein to the heart's tumultuous expressions. In a word, to be oneself in the here and now. She needs to live intensely, to get a taste of each situation, and sometimes to confront it, but it will be easy.

What one feels is as valuable as what one comprehends intellectually. The trap is then to pay too much attention to moods and sentiments. However, without them, life would be quite dull.

Venus trine Jupiter, orb -7° 03'

Charm and attractiveness are your child's assets. Indeed, the harmonious Venus-Jupiter aspect facilitates affective fulfillment.

She knows how to win the sympathy of her entourage with her accommodating sensitivity and her obvious desire to please. In many circumstances, she arouses esteem and consideration.

It is difficult to resist her seduction attempts, even when they are very overt.

Everyone has one's weapons. So what? Her strong point is that she easily obtains people's acceptance and approval.

★★★★★ Moon trine Neptune, orb 7° 28'

The harmonious Moon-Neptune aspect indicates an exceptional receptiveness.

Influenced by ambiances, your child can sense the elements of the spirit of the times that most people are unable to capture.

Her very sharp intuition enables her to feel the subtlest details, the "little nothing" which explains the reason beneath any comportment. Inspiration guides her steps, and imagination accompanies her in her everyday rhythms.

Emma pays extreme attention to her inner life, to the moments of calm during which one opens up and lets one's mind wander at will.

This configuration sometimes gives artistic talents in the fields of literature, painting, or music.

★★★★★ Venus trine Ascendant, orb -7° 5'

Thanks to the planet Venus, Emma's behavior is in harmony with her affective life.

She does not need to make special efforts to express her feelings in a spontaneous way, without upsetting people. An asset of natural ease and charm which is definitely not unpleasant.

★★★★★ Sun bi-quintile Uranus, orb -0° 42'

This harmonious aspect between the Sun and Uranus reinforces your child's determination as well as her will to highlight her ideas and her views. Some of them are original, for her innovation abilities work wonders in many circumstances.

Perhaps she has a propensity to over-simplify or to schematize situations. A double-edged resolve. People do not equally appreciate her contrasted positions, sometimes apparently inordinate if people do not take an in-depth look. It is yes or no, black or white.

Anyway, her inventiveness is appealing and often amazes her entourage. Emma leaves nobody indifferent, and her opinions are as relevant as astonishing.

She shows very early that she has a responsible and almost adult personality. Her parents must not weigh too heavily on it. Indeed, a child remains a child, with the same vulnerabilities and the same need for support.

★★★★★ Sun inconjunction Jupiter, orb -2° 54'

Although the Sun-Jupiter aspect displayed in your child's natal chart indicates a keen desire for social integration, it can also provoke several excesses. Whenever ambition is prevailing, immoderation is looming.

The downside of this configuration is to sacrifice an essential part of oneself to some enterprising but disproportionate plan. Extreme opportunism and wild desire to adapt oneself result in the risk of missing one's target.

Perhaps Emma has an exuberant and overly demonstrative nature. Fits of temper or disappointments caused by the under-estimation of the aim are frequent.

However, this aspect reveals very clearly her positive character in a family environment which exhorts her to excessive reserve and caution. Finally, everything is a matter of balance and context.

A Few Orientation Keys

To conclude, we provide as an indication a few keys for Emma's orientation. This does not mean to choose for her a possible vocation or to oppose her decisions, but to help her compensate for possible weaknesses and to make the most of her gifts and specific qualities.

This analysis claims to be synthetical. It considers several astrological features in an endeavor to define an accurate profile of the adult in the making your child is.

One of the criteria taken into account includes the determination and the vulnerability of the planets of the chart. Such vulnerability is calculated in relation to the negative aspects that each planet receives, balanced by the nature of the aspect and its orb.

This analysis enables to deduce archetypes of personality corresponding to your child and to provide the most appropriate pieces of advice for her blossoming until his adult life.

The Need for Emotions, for Excitement, and for Exchanges

Your child is emotional, without the shadow of a doubt. Touched by human issues, by the spirit of the times, and by facts, she lives on emotions.

If her work deprives her of them, it is certain that she will transfer this thirst for emotions to her private life, which may entail the risks of a tumultuous life.

More than anyone, she is driven by the need to live and to deeply experience each minute of her existence. A profession with neither spark nor excitement is for your little girl a stone to be dragged.

Better than anyone, she knows how to give a human quality to her relations and to bank on unbridled feelings.

This is a double-edged characteristic. While she is able to get what she is dreaming of by committing herself body and soul, she may also display excessive sensitivity and conspicuous vulnerability. She must strike a subtle balance between an obvious need for contacts and a certain impressionability potentially harmful to a rigorous life organization.

It is recommended to avoid professions requiring a heart of stone, an indifference Emma cannot display for a long time without hurting an essential part of herself.

Conversely, her qualities work wonders in an occupation having human aspects, provided that she is not requested to handle people's difficulties objectively.

The Need for Ideal and for Singularity

Do not ask anything from your child. If she is not motivated by some inner certainty, her hour has not come. Besides, she needs time to express herself and to discover her calling.

Indeed, she has a calling. It would be unavailing to frustrate it.

When there is no identified path, it is important to remain flexible enough (multidisciplinary training), so as not to jeopardize a destiny which, sooner or later, will show its specificity.

It seems tricky to envisage a total integration into a workgroup. Team spirit is not her strong point. The propensity to go it alone must be respected, otherwise her qualities cannot fully develop.

She needs more than anyone to live first and foremost according to her own rhythms and her fundamental principles. At times, she may be the "ugly duckling" of the group, because her motivations are non-negotiable, and because an inner voice tells her that such or such option is unsuitable, whereas such or such alternative is irresistibly tempting.

She is an individualist through and through, a person capable of keeping a course without flinching, without being destabilized by the surrounding fluctuations.

Nevertheless, for her own sake, it is necessary to inculcate in her the sense of reality she sometimes lacks.

Conclusion

We hope that this reading has allowed you to better grasp – or discover – your child's specificities, and perhaps to unveil character traits which were not yet visible. The more one knows one's child, the more one is able to offer an enriching education and to help her become a fulfilled adult.

Depending on the chart, you may have observed that in some chapters, several character traits seem to contradict each other. This is normal, because just as a personality is complex, so the analysis of an astrological chart includes these contrasts, very fortunately.

Indeed, it is possible to be at the same time idealistic and active, or also dreamy and concerned for one's independence, etc. The chart reveals these assets or internal conflicts, which will be experienced alternately or simultaneously, depending on the transits or directions at play at a given period of life.

This report will be useful until her adolescence. From age 14 or 15, or slightly earlier depending on her maturity, the Astrotheme Detailed Portrait will make her discover all the facets of her personality in a document which complements this one.

Regarding her future professional orientation, also throughout adolescence, the Astrotheme Career Portrait is well-suited for efficiently taking over from this report, intended for you, her educators.

Finally, as we wrote in the introduction, self-confidence and trust in her future, indispensable keys for her balance, can be achieved only with the love, the tenderness, and the affection you will offer her unreservedly.
